

NORTH CAROLINA NEWS.

Glover not Dead—The Drummer Evangelist's Success.

Winston, N. C., Nov. 19.—[Special]—Thomas F. Glover, the Virginia drummer (from Richmond), who was last week reported by a number of papers as missing and presumably dead, is not dead at all. He is in Salisbury at a hotel, sick, and his mother is with him. He was not injured by the jump from a moving train, but is supposed to have been "out of his mind" at the time.

For several years "Bill" Fife was a "commercial traveler," and is said to have been engaged in an attempt to drink all the liquor as fast as it was distilled. He also had other similar "accomplishments," and was generally accredited as being one of the hardest nuts on the road.

He was born and reared in an adjoining county to this (Forsyth), but a short time ago he took up his residence at Fayetteville.

About two years ago he was converted, and for over a year he has devoted his whole time to the cause of the Master, and is now known throughout the State as "the drummer evangelist."

His success has been almost as remarkable as that of Sam Jones, though as yet he has been confined to narrower limits. He has not been out of the State, so far, but has held many religious revival meetings in this State, principally in the Piedmont region, and has converted thousands of people, mostly men.

He wages an uncompromising warfare against the liquor traffic wherever he goes, and is particularly successful in reclaiming the young men who are addicted to drinking. He has just closed a big meeting at Mooresville, a small town between Charlotte and Statesville, and here is the report of his week's work there:

At the least calculation, there were 600 professions and reclamations. Two hundred and three applicants for church membership have already been received; 1,200 men took the pledge never to touch another drop of whiskey and never to enter a bar-room again; 400 renounced dancing and card playing.

Mr. Fife made an appeal to the Presbyterians present for money sufficient to build a parsonage for the Presbyterian Church. The appeal was responded to by subscriptions to the amount of $2,000. Mr. Fife contributed $50 himself. A number of members of other churches also contributed to the same cause. Four hundred dollars was raised to pay on the tabernacle building, and a purse of $750 was presented to the Evangelist. Over $500 worth of Bibles were sold during the meeting by Mr. Fife's Bible agent.

That record will compare favorably with the results of Sam Jones' meetings in large cities, and if "Bill" Fife improves with age and experience he is destined to become as famous as the Georgia ex-cracker.

The Eastern Field Trial Association, of New York, will have its next meeting at High Point, N. C., instead of Amelia county, Va. High Point is only twelve miles from Winston, and there is much fine game and many fine-bred bird dogs in this section.

North Carolina was divided into two conference districts by the last general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, to be known as the North Carolina conference and Western North Carolina conference. The former convenes at Winston on Dec. 10th, and the latter meets at Concord on the 20th of this month. Bishop Hargrave will preside at both.

Dr. E. H. Jones, a dentist of Martinsville, Va., has located in Winston, and will practice his profession here.

Eupespy.
This is what you ought to have, in fact, you must have it, to fully enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon. And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you good digestion and out the demon Dyspepsia and install instead Eupespy. We recommend Electric Bitters for Dyspepsia and all diseases of Liver, Stomach and Kidneys. Sold at 50c, and $1.00 per bottle by Budwell, Christian & Barbee, druggists.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.
From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at Budwell, Christian and Barbee's drugstore, regular size, 50c and $1.00.

You are in a Bad Fix.

But we will cure you if you will pay us. Nervous and Debilitated, suffering from Nervous Debility, Seminal Weakness, and all the effects of early evil habits, or later indiscretions, which lead to Premature Decay, Consumption or Insanity, should send for and read the "Book of Life," giving particulars of a home cure. Sent (sealed) by addressing Dr. Parker's Medical and Surgical Institute, 151 North Spruce street, Nashville, Tenn. They guarantee a cure or no pay.—The Sunday Morning.

I have analyzed the whiskey known under the brand of "B Select," controlled by Julien Binford, Richmond, Va., and find it free from Fusil Oil and other impurities, and recommend its use for medicinal and family purposes. J. B. McCaw, M. D., late Professor of Chemistry, Medical College of Virginia. This reliable whiskey can be had at Marshall's European Hotel, 15 Salem avenue, Roanoke, Va. Oct. 24-eod2w

The Rev. Wm. Stout, Wiarion, Ont., states: After being ineffectually treated by seven or eight different doctors for Scrofula and Blood disease, I was cured by Burdock Blood Bitters. Write him for proof.

THE COMING STYLES.

Secrets That Have Crept Out from the Leading Fashion Work-shops.

As I have said, women and dress makers are tiring of the present mixed-up styles of dress, and a change is expected in the fall. In point of fact the medley of bygone styles fashioned to form the present is very incongruous. Models of it give us the empire skirt, the straight up and down sheath without sign of drapery or trimming; the long bodice, especially the back, recalls those worn by the wasp-waisted women of Louis XV's court; the front bodice, very ornate, rather flattened down the front, and curving in at the hips, is perhaps the only novelty which deserves the name; the highly puffed sleeve is a reminiscence of the renaissance, so are the Elizabethan ruff and the Medici collars; the metal belts belong to the middle ages, and the broad hat is a medley of the empire with the flat time which came after; the long handles of umbrellas and parasols remind one of the empire canes, and the shoes include two periods, the pointed toes of the renaissance and the modern walking heel. As you see, we are in the composite period of dress. Reve in his new albums shows his desire to turn back to the Louis XV. style, to copy it more faithfully, to the exclusion of some of the rest, and no doubt he will have his way, for couturiers large and small willingly yield to his changes, and adopt what he dictates without much murmuring. Indeed, those at the head of large establishments have not much time to murmur, much less to invent, new dresses and styles.

Among the elegant toilets invented by Reve for the seaside and watering-places is a pompadour crepe de Chine, to which he added the panniers so much regretted by ladies whose hips are insufficient to support the present fashions. These crapy stuffs strewn with variegated flowers and soft green foliage are always the most effective for promoting in parks or for driving in avenues shaded with trees, whose overlapping branches temper the sun's rays and throw just enough greenish tint to enhance physique and dress. Nothing seems wearier this season unless it has a dash of yellow to touch up other shades and help them to do their duty in brightness. This cream pompadour dress was strewn with large pink and crimson roses and yellow daisies, and the foliage interlacing the folds was so disposed as to run in longitudinal stripes. The straight skirt was gathered just a little at the waist in front, so as to look as if it were just a bit tucked up; then it was disposed into wide panels at the sides, which met at the back waist and incased the fan-shaped plaits of the back. The underskirt was pale pink silk. The front edge of the front panel on the left was trimmed with a row of rosettes made of yellowish green ribbon to match the foliage. From the front gathers small panniers of crepe were draped over the hips, folded and terminating with the joining of the side panels over the black fan skirt. The bodice, as much as modern style will allow, was the Louis XV., pointed in front and back, of pompadour crepe de Chine. The front of the bodice was trimmed with a plastron of cream Venetian guipure, lying in downward laid festoons, growing narrower as they reached the waist; neck band of guipure. Band and plastron were lined with pale pink silk. Down the left side of the crepe de Chine, near the face, five small green rosettes formed the bodice trimming. Cream guipure sleeves, plain and tight to the elbow, then draped and puffed on pale pink silk foundation. Broad brimmed Leghorn hat, of clear fancy straw which was scalloped all around the edge, then lined in pale pink silk, trimmed with cream ostrich tips, which lay in a large bunch on the front brim, and another at the back, coming forward on the crown. Wide green strings attached to the close-fitting back, brought forward and tied into a large bow under the chin. — Chicago Times.

TWO CLEVER PETS.
A Kestrel and Rat Which Are Affectionate as Well as Intelligent.
I see in your book on "British Birds" you state that the kestrel is easily tamed. Our bird was taken from a nest last year and put into a cage out of doors, for a few days only, until fledged. He was then turned out and flew across the park into the woods and was seen no more for some days, when he returned, found his way into the house, and has never voluntarily left it since. We often turn him out and see him a mile or more from the house, but soon after find him searching for an open window by which he may reach the dining-room, where he lives by preference, perching on a picture-frame, but always coming on to my husband's arm when called, even though with thirty people at dinner, and through the glare of lamps and candles. He invariably twitters a sort of soft song when we speak to him. He is a grand bird, in perfect plumage. * * * I have a white rat, who lives as all our pets do, entirely loose in the house or garden, perfectly free to leave us if they chose. The rat was given to me as old and worthless two years ago, then quite wild. He gradually became extremely tame, and, during a severe illness I had last year, he took it into his head to sit on my pillow to guard me. Ever since then he has continued to sleep there; he runs up-stairs with me, and follows me to bed, sleeping always on the bolster or pillow by my head. He is very plucky and defended himself during one whole night when he was shut up accidentally in the same room with a large and savage cat. He was found sitting up with teeth and claws ready, and was perfectly overjoyed when his human friends took him up. Though six months have elapsed, nothing will induce him to enter that room again. Our dogs are perfect friends with him. He uses his left paw always when drinking, "laddling" the water up to his mouth, even from the bottom of a tumbler, and is quite "left-handed." — Letter in London Spectator.

A PANTHER FIGHT.
The Fur Often Flies Until One or Both of the Combatants Dies.
I have often wondered what hindered the cougars from being very plentiful. They are monarchs of the woods, and are very shy, with plenty of game and cattle to live on. This spring I was talking with an old cruiser (a man who hunts for timber and good land claims), who had followed the business for the last twenty years in Oregon and this State. He never takes a gun, but carries only a blanket and a small axe. He related that one night when he was camping in the head of a ravine about dark he heard a cougar scream on one of the ridges, and this one was answered by another on the opposite ridge. They kept working toward the head, until finally they came together some three hundred yards above him in some quaking aspen; and such a row and racket as they made he had never heard before. They rolled down within one hundred yards of him; and he says that he was pretty well scared; but he kept up a big fire and stayed behind that. They quieted down in a couple of hours, and the next morning, when it was light enough, he went on to the battle ground. He found one of them lying there dead, all cut and torn to pieces. It was a very large one. Four days afterwards, as he was coming back the same way, some five hundred yards from where he had found the first one dead, This too, was all cut and torn as the first had been. At another time, in Oregon, he heard a big fight going on, but did not go to see the results. He was stopping one night with an old Indian, who had hunted and trapped all his life, and was telling him about the fight, when the Indian said that that was the way when two old males met; one or the other was killed, and very often both; and that whenever the male would find the young ones and the mother absent he would kill the last one of them, but if the mother were with them she would keep him off. That must be the reason that the mother goes with the young until they are nearly two years old. They say that all the cat kind will kill their young. We know that this is so with the domestic cat.—Forest and Stream.

A Lover's Description.
Miss Mugg—I don't see how it is your sister failed to find me at the station. You said you would describe me to her.

Infatuated Lover (who sees a good deal more in Miss Mugg than other folks can)—Yes, I told her to look for a beautiful girl, with the face of a Madonna, and the form of a sylph. It's queer she missed you.—N. Y. Weekly.

Not Even a Pilot.
"Who is the hero in that novel?"

"Hero? There is a prig, a dude, a minister and a fool, but you don't expect a hero in a modern novel do you? (Shaw!) If it was not for the villains it would not be worth reading."

THE WORLD'S COFFEE.
Where It Comes From and What It Is Worth in Cold Cash.
Of the vast quantity of coffee supplied to the United States something like two-thirds of the whole comes from Brazil, which country, it might be mentioned, produces considerably more than one-half of the world's total supply of that article.
Not long since Ceylon was the third coffee country in the world, and promised to be second, but the crop in that country has fallen off from 988,328 hundred weight in the season of 1874-75 to 150,000 hundred weight in the season of 1887-88. Such a sudden and almost complete collapse of a great industry has seldom been known.

The coffee plant itself is best described as a shrub. Its appearance is graceful and attractive, and under favorable circumstances it will attain a height of from fifteen to twenty feet. The seeds are commonly termed coffee beans, not because they resemble beans proper, but from the Arabic word "bunn." The berries are not usually picked until they become fully ripe. It is believed that it is owing to the careful attention to the matter of picking by the Arabs that Mocha coffee, although inferior in size and appearance, commands its high price in the market. Brazilian coffee stands in value much below even the native Ceylon and East India coffees, because of the fact of being carelessly grown, gathered and cured.

THE COMING STYLES.

Secrets That Have Crept Out from the Leading Fashion Work-shops.

As I have said, women and dress makers are tiring of the present mixed-up styles of dress, and a change is expected in the fall. In point of fact the medley of bygone styles fashioned to form the present is very incongruous. Models of it give us the empire skirt, the straight up and down sheath without sign of drapery or trimming; the long bodice, especially the back, recalls those worn by the wasp-waisted women of Louis XV's court; the front bodice, very ornate, rather flattened down the front, and curving in at the hips, is perhaps the only novelty which deserves the name; the highly puffed sleeve is a reminiscence of the renaissance, so are the Elizabethan ruff and the Medici collars; the metal belts belong to the middle ages, and the broad hat is a medley of the empire with the flat time which came after; the long handles of umbrellas and parasols remind one of the empire canes, and the shoes include two periods, the pointed toes of the renaissance and the modern walking heel. As you see, we are in the composite period of dress. Reve in his new albums shows his desire to turn back to the Louis XV. style, to copy it more faithfully, to the exclusion of some of the rest, and no doubt he will have his way, for couturiers large and small willingly yield to his changes, and adopt what he dictates without much murmuring. Indeed, those at the head of large establishments have not much time to murmur, much less to invent, new dresses and styles.

Among the elegant toilets invented by Reve for the seaside and watering-places is a pompadour crepe de Chine, to which he added the panniers so much regretted by ladies whose hips are insufficient to support the present fashions. These crapy stuffs strewn with variegated flowers and soft green foliage are always the most effective for promoting in parks or for driving in avenues shaded with trees, whose overlapping branches temper the sun's rays and throw just enough greenish tint to enhance physique and dress. Nothing seems wearier this season unless it has a dash of yellow to touch up other shades and help them to do their duty in brightness. This cream pompadour dress was strewn with large pink and crimson roses and yellow daisies, and the foliage interlacing the folds was so disposed as to run in longitudinal stripes. The straight skirt was gathered just a little at the waist in front, so as to look as if it were just a bit tucked up; then it was disposed into wide panels at the sides, which met at the back waist and incased the fan-shaped plaits of the back. The underskirt was pale pink silk. The front edge of the front panel on the left was trimmed with a row of rosettes made of yellowish green ribbon to match the foliage. From the front gathers small panniers of crepe were draped over the hips, folded and terminating with the joining of the side panels over the black fan skirt. The bodice, as much as modern style will allow, was the Louis XV., pointed in front and back, of pompadour crepe de Chine. The front of the bodice was trimmed with a plastron of cream Venetian guipure, lying in downward laid festoons, growing narrower as they reached the waist; neck band of guipure. Band and plastron were lined with pale pink silk. Down the left side of the crepe de Chine, near the face, five small green rosettes formed the bodice trimming. Cream guipure sleeves, plain and tight to the elbow, then draped and puffed on pale pink silk foundation. Broad brimmed Leghorn hat, of clear fancy straw which was scalloped all around the edge, then lined in pale pink silk, trimmed with cream ostrich tips, which lay in a large bunch on the front brim, and another at the back, coming forward on the crown. Wide green strings attached to the close-fitting back, brought forward and tied into a large bow under the chin. — Chicago Times.

TWO CLEVER PETS.
A Kestrel and Rat Which Are Affectionate as Well as Intelligent.
I see in your book on "British Birds" you state that the kestrel is easily tamed. Our bird was taken from a nest last year and put into a cage out of doors, for a few days only, until fledged. He was then turned out and flew across the park into the woods and was seen no more for some days, when he returned, found his way into the house, and has never voluntarily left it since. We often turn him out and see him a mile or more from the house, but soon after find him searching for an open window by which he may reach the dining-room, where he lives by preference, perching on a picture-frame, but always coming on to my husband's arm when called, even though with thirty people at dinner, and through the glare of lamps and candles. He invariably twitters a sort of soft song when we speak to him. He is a grand bird, in perfect plumage. * * * I have a white rat, who lives as all our pets do, entirely loose in the house or garden, perfectly free to leave us if they chose. The rat was given to me as old and worthless two years ago, then quite wild. He gradually became extremely tame, and, during a severe illness I had last year, he took it into his head to sit on my pillow to guard me. Ever since then he has continued to sleep there; he runs up-stairs with me, and follows me to bed, sleeping always on the bolster or pillow by my head. He is very plucky and defended himself during one whole night when he was shut up accidentally in the same room with a large and savage cat. He was found sitting up with teeth and claws ready, and was perfectly overjoyed when his human friends took him up. Though six months have elapsed, nothing will induce him to enter that room again. Our dogs are perfect friends with him. He uses his left paw always when drinking, "laddling" the water up to his mouth, even from the bottom of a tumbler, and is quite "left-handed." — Letter in London Spectator.

A PANTHER FIGHT.
The Fur Often Flies Until One or Both of the Combatants Dies.
I have often wondered what hindered the cougars from being very plentiful. They are monarchs of the woods, and are very shy, with plenty of game and cattle to live on. This spring I was talking with an old cruiser (a man who hunts for timber and good land claims), who had followed the business for the last twenty years in Oregon and this State. He never takes a gun, but carries only a blanket and a small axe. He related that one night when he was camping in the head of a ravine about dark he heard a cougar scream on one of the ridges, and this one was answered by another on the opposite ridge. They kept working toward the head, until finally they came together some three hundred yards above him in some quaking aspen; and such a row and racket as they made he had never heard before. They rolled down within one hundred yards of him; and he says that he was pretty well scared; but he kept up a big fire and stayed behind that. They quieted down in a couple of hours, and the next morning, when it was light enough, he went on to the battle ground. He found one of them lying there dead, all cut and torn to pieces. It was a very large one. Four days afterwards, as he was coming back the same way, some five hundred yards from where he had found the first one dead, This too, was all cut and torn as the first had been. At another time, in Oregon, he heard a big fight going on, but did not go to see the results. He was stopping one night with an old Indian, who had hunted and trapped all his life, and was telling him about the fight, when the Indian said that that was the way when two old males met; one or the other was killed, and very often both; and that whenever the male would find the young ones and the mother absent he would kill the last one of them, but if the mother were with them she would keep him off. That must be the reason that the mother goes with the young until they are nearly two years old. They say that all the cat kind will kill their young. We know that this is so with the domestic cat.—Forest and Stream.

A Lover's Description.
Miss Mugg—I don't see how it is your sister failed to find me at the station. You said you would describe me to her.

Infatuated Lover (who sees a good deal more in Miss Mugg than other folks can)—Yes, I told her to look for a beautiful girl, with the face of a Madonna, and the form of a sylph. It's queer she missed you.—N. Y. Weekly.

Not Even a Pilot.
"Who is the hero in that novel?"

"Hero? There is a prig, a dude, a minister and a fool, but you don't expect a hero in a modern novel do you? (Shaw!) If it was not for the villains it would not be worth reading."

THE WORLD'S COFFEE.
Where It Comes From and What It Is Worth in Cold Cash.
Of the vast quantity of coffee supplied to the United States something like two-thirds of the whole comes from Brazil, which country, it might be mentioned, produces considerably more than one-half of the world's total supply of that article.
Not long since Ceylon was the third coffee country in the world, and promised to be second, but the crop in that country has fallen off from 988,328 hundred weight in the season of 1874-75 to 150,000 hundred weight in the season of 1887-88. Such a sudden and almost complete collapse of a great industry has seldom been known.

The coffee plant itself is best described as a shrub. Its appearance is graceful and attractive, and under favorable circumstances it will attain a height of from fifteen to twenty feet. The seeds are commonly termed coffee beans, not because they resemble beans proper, but from the Arabic word "bunn." The berries are not usually picked until they become fully ripe. It is believed that it is owing to the careful attention to the matter of picking by the Arabs that Mocha coffee, although inferior in size and appearance, commands its high price in the market. Brazilian coffee stands in value much below even the native Ceylon and East India coffees, because of the fact of being carelessly grown, gathered and cured.

LADIES!!

For chapped hands, face and lips try

Lily of the Valley Lotion.

It is not sticky; better than glycerine.

It has been tried, and is a success.

Price 25 cents. Prepared only by the wide-awake druggists,

Fox & Christian.

nov19-1m

Southwest Virginia Mineral,

Timber, Farm and City Property

Agency.

Principal Office, Roanoke, Virginia.

MINERALS A SPECIALTY.

The undersigned have opened an office for the sale of mineral, timber and farm land, and city property on commission. They will develop mineral lands, analyze ores, give instructions for developing on a reasonable charge, sell farm and timber lands. All mineral, farm and timber lands listed with them for sale will be extensively advertised through agencies in the Northern States and Europe. A record of all ores, their analyses and location will be kept in our office for inspection of buyers.

MINERALS A SPECIALTY.

All persons having mineral, farm or timber lands are requested to list them with us for sale. The long experience of our senior, Mr. J. A. Dalby, in mining and sale of real estate warrant us in assuring our patrons that their interests will be properly guarded in the sale of their property, and all money coming into their hands will be promptly paid over. Owners may, if preferred, employ their special agent or attorneys.

Persons, in sending descriptive list of property, are specially cautioned against giving overdrawn descriptions, as it lessens chances of sale. We also advise against giving options on mineral properties, they often interfere with sales and lead to litigation. We shall do a legitimate commission business.

Active, reliable agents wanted in every county in Southwest Virginia.

All city property listed with us will have prompt attention, and sold to best advantage.

We have booked for sale a list of improved and unimproved property, business and dwelling houses in different sections of the city.

Persons wishing to buy or sell are respectfully invited to call on us.

Office, Room 3, Moomaw Building, Jefferson street.

Refer to First National Bank of Roanoke, Virginia.

J. A. DALBY, SONS & CO.

nov11-6m3taw

ENGLEBY & BROS.,

MANUFACTURERS OF

TIN AND SHEET-IRON WARE,

AND DEALERS IN ALL KINDS OF

COOKING AND HEATING STOVES.

Plumbing and Gas-Fitting, Roofing,

Spouting and Jobbing.

19 Salem avenue, ROANOKE, VA

au5-tf.

JAMES DEVON,

(Successor to E. Walsak.)

Dyeing and Scouring Establishment,

104 Campbell street, Third avenue s. w.

ROANOKE, VIRGINIA.

Everything dyed and cleaned in the best manner. Not excelled by any establishment in the country

J. D. McNAMEE. TOM. HAYSLIP.

McNAMEE & HAYSLIP,

HOUSE, SIGN AND FRESCO PAINTERS,

GRAINERS AND PAPER HANGERS.

Shops, Radford, Va. Richlands, Va.,

Buena Vista, Va. Headquarters, Roanoke, Va. Lock Box 9, Roanoke, Va.

tf

Roanoke Trust, Loan and Safe Deposit Co.

Statement, October 31, 1890.

RESOURCES.	LIABILITIES.
Loans and discounts.....$325,097 31	Capital.....$250,000 00
Stocks.....223,265 00	Undivided profits and gross earnings.....127,985 15
Real estate.....13,500 00	Deposits on certificate.....95,084 73
Furniture.....600 00	Deposits on check.....167,450 02
Cash on hand and in banks.....115,563 53	Bills payable.....5,058 33
Expenses and taxes.....2,887 62	Rediscouts.....34,735 23
$680,913 46	$680,913 46

P. L. TERRY, Pres.
Directors: H. S. Trout, Edw. Nininger, S. W. Jamison, P. L. Terry, J. A. Jamison.

J. E. HATCHER & CO.,

REAL ESTATE AND STOCK BROKERS,

314 High Street, Buchanan, Virginia.

Correspondence solicited and promptly answered.

oct15-3m

S. S. SHAFER,

JEWELER,

No. 5 SALEM AVE. - - - FULL STOCK.

REPAIRING PROMPTLY EXECUTED.

Jan 9-tf

PROFESSIONAL.

JOHN E. PENN. LUCIAN E. COCKE.

PENN & COCKE.

ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW.

ROANOKE, VA.

COURTS.—Roanoke and adjoining counties.

OFFICE.—Corner Commerce street and Salem avenue.

nov1-1m

W. S. GOOCH.

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

Room 5, over Commercial National Bank,

ROANOKE, VA.

Courts: All the courts of Roanoke City and County.

oct26-tf Telephone 99.

CLARENCE COLEMAN,

CIVIL ENGINEER,

Room 12, Moomaw Building,

JEFFERSON ST. ROANOKE, VA.

Prompt attention to work in any part of the State. Correspondence solicited.

oct26-tf.

G. W. HANSBROUGH, J. SAM. G. WILLIAMS.

HANSBROUGH & WILLIAMS,

ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW.

Room No. 11, - - - Moomaw Building,

Jefferson Street, Roanoke, Va.

Will practice in the Hustings Court of the city of Roanoke, Court of Appeals of Virginia and United States district courts.

mar25-tf

D. S. GOOD,

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,

Roanoke, Va.

Room No. 14, New Kirk Building, opposite Kenny's tea store.

oct1-1yr